

1 I. Introduction

2 The Sun has not articulated a single valid basis for the Court to reconsider the prior 3 discovery rulings referenced in its motion. Nearly six months ago, in July of this year, the Sun
 4 moved to compel Defendants to produce (i) all documents that concern or relate to the Review-
 5 Journal's investigation of the Las Vegas Convention and Visitors Authority; and (ii) all documents
 6 that discuss or mention the Sun's editorial viewpoint.¹ The Sun contended that these documents
 7 were necessary to show that the RJ was Mr. Adelson's alter ego and that he directs the newspaper's 8 editorial decisionmaking. The Court accepted the Sun's argument that Mr. Adelson's level of 9 control over the newspaper was relevant to the Sun's alter ego claim, and granted the motion in 10 part. The Court limited the production to documents reflecting an express directive by Mr.
 11 Adelson, a category that included documents from Mr. Adelson himself and any communications 12 between third parties that reflected such an express directive. The Court reasoned, correctly, that 13 communications between third parties that did not reflect Mr. Adelson's directives were not 14 probative of whether Mr. Adelson was controlling the newspaper. The Court adopted the same 15 rationale in its recent November 13, 2020, ruling in which it compelled Defendants to produce 16 various categories of documents relating to stories that ran in the Review-Journal, but again limited 17 the production to documents reflecting an express directive from Mr. Adelson.

18 Strangely, even though the Sun essentially won those motions and persuaded the Court to 19 produce precisely the documents it claimed to need—i.e., documents showing whether Mr.
 20 Adelson was issuing express directives to Review-Journal employees about certain topics—the 21 Sun is now asking the Court to reconsider these rulings and order Defendants to produce third 22 party communications regarding various news stories and related topics regardless of whether they 23 reflect an express directive from Mr. Adelson or not.

24 The Sun's argument is difficult to follow. The Sun devotes most of its motion to accusing 25 Defendants of withholding Mr. Adelson's 2016 employment agreement and three random emails 26 that the Sun wrongly claims are smoking guns that prove that the RJ is Mr. Adelson's alter ego.

28 ¹ These were the Sun's Request Nos. 47 and 48, respectively.

1 The Sun somehow reasons from there that these documents are new evidence that would change 2 the Court's prior ruling and entitle the Sun to third-party communications that do not contain or 3 reflect directives from Mr. Adelson (or even mention him at all). But the employment agreement 4 just shows that Mr. Adelson is formally a co-publisher of the Review-Journal newspaper, which 5 should surprise nobody since the Adelson family has a controlling interest in News+Media Capital 6 Group LLC, which owns the paper. And Mr. Adelson is not even on the three emails the Sun cites; 7 moreover, nothing in those emails remotely suggests that Mr. Dumont is a "tool of communication 8 to conceal Mr. Adelson" as the Sun insultingly puts it. Sun's Mtn. to Reconsider, ECF No. 242, at 9 9.

10 Perhaps more importantly, nothing in the employment agreement or emails changes the 11 logic of the Court's prior ruling. Although unclear, the Sun seems to be claiming that these 12 documents show Mr. Adelson was controlling the Review-Journal to such an extent that any 13 actions or communications of others relating the newspaper's editorial coverage could be assumed 14 to have been ordered by him. But this is just a misrepresentation about the content of the 15 documents, none of which come close to establishing this. The employment agreement does not 16 say that Mr. Adelson exercises complete control over the Review-Journal. Two of the emails are 17 about [REDACTED]; neither contains directions from Mr. Adelson or 18 suggests that he ordered anyone to do anything. Id. at 33–39 (Exs. 3–4). The third email is about
 19 [REDACTED]
 20 [REDACTED]. Id. at 40–41 (Ex. 5).

21 Desperate to draw attention away from the holes in its argument (and its meritless lawsuit 22 more generally), the Sun accuses Defendants of misconduct, this time contending that Defendants 23 misrepresented facts to the Court. This argument does not survive even minimal scrutiny. The big 24 alleged misstatement on which the Sun hangs its hat is merely a mistaken comment Defendants' 25 counsel made when commenting on Mr. Adelson's employment status in another case, in another 26 court, over a year ago and shortly after that counsel was brought in to the matter. The Court here 27 obviously could not have, in ruling on the Sun's motions to compel, relied on a statement made to 28

1 a different court with a different judge in a different case. The Sun also claims that Defendants
 2 told the Court that Mr. Adelson was simply the Review-Journal’s “mere, distant owner” but it cites 3 nothing in the record to support its contention and in fact Defendants never said this. Id. at 5.

4 Finally, the Sun suggests that Defendants should have produced the employment 5 agreement and emails earlier. The employment agreement—which is not responsive to any of the 6 Sun’s 340-plus document requests—was produced on October 14, and the emails were produced 7 on October 20. They were produced in the normal course and Defendants were under no obligation
 8 to produce them earlier. Moreover, speaking of timeliness, the Sun’s delay in bringing this motion 9 thoroughly undercuts all of its arguments. The ruling on Requests 47 and 48 that the Sun wants 10 the Court to reconsider was issued on July 20. The documents the Sun claims are supposedly 11 “shocking” and “damning” were produced in mid-October. Yet the Sun waited until the last week 12 of November (the night before Thanksgiving, to be exact) to file this motion. If the Sun really 13 believed these documents were so important, it would have sought reconsideration immediately 14 instead of waiting over a month and then filing its motion without warning (let alone the mandatory 15 meet and confer) the night before a holiday.² The Sun knows these documents are inconsequential 16 and reconsideration is unwarranted. This motion is just another attempt by the Sun to run up costs 17 relitigating issues that have already been decided (twice). It should be denied.

18 II. The Sun Failed To Establish A Basis Under Rule 60(b) For The Court To Reconsider
 19 Its Prior Discovery Orders.

20 The Sun requests reconsideration of the Court’s prior discovery orders under subsections 21 (b)(3) and (b)(6) of Rule 60, which allow the Court to relieve a party from “a final judgment, order, 22 or proceeding” because of, respectively, “misrepresentation, or misconduct by an opposing party” 23 or “any other reason that justifies relief.” Fed. R. Civ. P. (60)(b). As the Sun’s own authority 24 acknowledges, “motions for reconsideration are disfavored. A movant must not repeat arguments 25 already presented unless (and only to the extent) necessary to explain controlling, intervening law

26
 27 ² The Sun’s motion is subject to the requirements of L.R. 26-6. The Sun ignored its obligation to 28 meet and confer before filing a motion (again) and blindsided Defendants with this meritless motion.

1 or to argue new facts. A movant who repeats arguments will be subject to appropriate 2 sanctions.” Morrison v. Quest Diagnostics Inc., 2020 WL 4207020, at *1 (D. Nev. July 22, 2020).

3 With respect to Rule 60(b)(3) specifically, “the moving party must prove by clear and 4 convincing evidence that the [order] was obtained through fraud, misrepresentation, or other 5 misconduct and the conduct complained of prevented the losing party from fully and fairly 6 presenting the defense.” De Saracho v. Custom Food Mach., Inc., 206 F.3d 874, 880 (9th Cir.
 7 2000). As to Rule 60(b)(6), the Ninth Circuit instructs that it is to be “used sparingly as an equitable 8 remedy to prevent manifest injustice and . . . only where extraordinary circumstances prevented a 9 party from taking timely action to prevent or correct an erroneous [order].” Latshaw v. Trainer 10 Wortham & Co., 452 F.3d 1097, 1103 (9th Cir. 2006).

11 The Sun fails to make the requisite showing under Rule 60(b). As detailed below, the Sun 12 does not and cannot point to a single misrepresentation by Defendants to this Court, let alone one 13 that affected the Court’s pertinent discovery rulings. Equally important, the Sun has not drawn any 14 coherent connection between the four documents it cites as “new evidence” and the orders it asks 15 the Court to revisit. Lastly, the Sun’s accusation that Defendants engaged in discovery misconduct 16 by supposedly withholding the four documents is meritless.

17 A. The Court Should Reject the Sun’s Baseless Contention That Defendants 18 Misrepresented Facts in Prior Discovery Hearings.

19 Contrary to the Sun’s assertions, Defendants have not made any misrepresentations to this 20 Court about Mr. Adelson’s involvement in the Review-Journal newspaper. The Sun accuses 21 Defendants of “portray[ing] Mr. Adelson as a mere, distant owner”; making “several 22 [mis]representations about Mr. Adelson’s role in the company”; and arguing that “the Sun could 23 not link Mr. Adelson, a ‘mere owner’ of the Review-Journal, to the day-to-day business of the 24 newspapers.” Sun’s Mtn. to Reconsider, ECF. No. 242, at 5–6. But the Sun conspicuously cites 25 nothing in the record to support such accusations, nor can it because Defendants never said these 26 things.

27
 28

1 Instead, the Sun cites to an inadvertent misstatement made over a year ago by Mr. Jones in 2 another court proceeding—i.e., the since-stayed state court litigation. Id. at 4. The statement was 3 made shortly after Mr. Jones appeared in that case. More importantly, that statement was not made 4 to this Court and could not have impacted this Court’s prior discovery rulings, and thus cannot be 5 a basis to overturn this Court’s prior, correct, discovery orders.³

6 The Sun points to two other statements to support its misrepresentation claim: (1) in his 7 motion to dismiss, Mr. Adelson argued that he does not compete in the relevant market in his 8 individual capacity (id. at 4–5); and (2) in opposition to the Sun’s motion to compel its first set of 9 document requests, Defendants argued that the Sun had no factual basis for its suspicion that Mr.
 10 Adelson ordered the Review-Journal’s investigation into the Las Vegas Convention and Visitors 11 Authority (“LVCVA”) (id. at 5). These were truthful statements. Moreover, neither of them say 12 that Mr. Adelson was a distant owner or that there was no link between him and the day-to-day 13 business of the newspapers.

14 Put simply, Defendants have never represented to this Court that Mr. Adelson is not 15 employed by the Review-Journal or that Mr. Adelson “is simply a distant owner of the Review-16 Journal without day-to-day input, control, or influence on the business newspaper.” Id. at 2. Rather, 17 Defendants’ position in opposition to the Sun’s various motions to compel has been that even if 18 Mr. Adelson was an involved in the Review-Journal’s editorial decisionmaking, such is not 19 probative of the Sun’s alter ego or antitrust claims. See Defs’ Opp. to Sun’s Mtn. to Compel (Set 20 1), ECF 84, at 7 (“The only theory proffered [by the Sun] was that, if documents show that Mr.
 21 Adelson directed the Review-Journal to investigate the LVCVA, it may support the Sun’s alter 22 ego allegations against Mr. Adelson. Even if this unsubstantiated allegation were true, that fact 23 would have little or no relevance to proving the alter ego allegations.”); Defs’ Opp. to Sun’s Mtn.
 24 to Compel (Set 2), ECF No. 121, at 10 (“The Sun’s contention that it would signal some 25 anticompetitive purpose if the Review-Journal’s owners were involved in the newspaper’s editorial

26 ³ The comment at issue was made in an unrelated context—in response to the Sun’s insistence that 27 counsel search the ESI of Mr. Adelson (who was not a named defendant in the state court case) 28 for materials concerning the Sun Box redesign. See Exhibit A (Declaration of Michael J. Gayan), at ¶ 4; Exhibit B (11/12/19 Hearing Transcript Excerpts), at 22–44.

1 decisions is equally baseless. Antitrust law does not regulate a business owner’s level of 2 involvement in his business.”); Defs’ Opp. to Sun’s Renewed Mtn. to Compel (Set 2), ECF No.
 3 145, at 24, 32 (similar).

5 B. The Sun Does Not Establish A Connection Between The Four Documents And The Discovery Rulings It Asks The Court To Revisit.

6 The Sun’s motion also fails because the Sun at no point establishes a coherent connection 7 between the documents it cites as “new evidence” and its request that the Court alter its prior 8 discovery orders.⁴ In an attempt to cobble together such a connection, the Sun resorts to 9 mischaracterizing the Court’s July 20 and November 13 discovery rulings and the reasons 10 underlying them. Specifically, the Sun’s motion reads as though, on July 20, the Court declined to 11 order the production of any documents in response to Request Nos. 47 and 48 because the Sun 12 could not link Mr. Adelson to the day-to-day business of the Review-Journal. Sun’s Mtn. to 13 Reconsider, ECF No. 242, at 5–9. That is not what happened.

14 Request No. 47 sought all documents “that concern or relate to [the Review-Journal’s] 15 investigation of the Las Vegas Convention and Visitors Authority.” Sun’s Mtn. to Compel (Set 1), 16 ECF No. 76, at 9. Request No. 48 sought all documents “that discuss or mention the Sun’s editorial 17 viewpoint.” Id. The Court agreed with the Sun that Request Nos. 47 and 48 were probative of alter 18 ego insofar as they sought communications that may show Mr. Adelson exerting “influence and 19 control” over the Review-Journal’s news reporting. The Court thus ordered Defendants to produce 20 any communications containing an express directive from Mr. Adelson to the Review-Journal on 21 the subject topics—the LVCVA and the Sun’s editorial viewpoint. See Court’s July 20 Order, ECF 22 No. 102, at 13–17, 51–54.

25 ⁴ Rather than specifically identify the Court’s prior discovery orders that supposedly require 26 correcting, the Sun vaguely asks the Court “to reconsider its position with regards to any of the 27 Sun’s document requests that relate to [1] Mr. Adelson’s role at the Review-Journal, [2] the Sun’s 28 alter-ego theory of liability, and [3] any other relevant discovery orders.” ECF No. 242, at 9. Other than the Court’s July 20 and November 13 discovery orders, however, there are no other rulings that are arguably implicated by the Sun’s contentions in this motion.

1 However, the Court declined to order Defendants to produce documents or 2 communications of other people that did not contain express directives from Mr. Adelson—the 3 only alleged “alter ego” defendant in the Sun’s complaint. Id. The Court reasoned that, absent 4 proof that Mr. Adelson directed those other people to investigate or report on the topics at issue, 5 their communications were not probative of the Sun’s alter ego claim against Mr. Adelson. Id.
 6 Thus, this discovery limitation—the one the Sun contends requires correcting—was based not, as 7 the Sun suggests, on whether Mr. Adelson was involved in the Review-Journal’s day-to-day 8 business, but on whether Mr. Adelson instructed other people to investigate or report on the 9 specific topics identified in the requests. Id. In other words, the Court limited discovery in this 10 manner because the Sun could not show that Mr. Adelson, in fact, directed others to carry out his 11 editorial wishes with respect to the topics identified in Requests 47 and 48—i.e., LVCVA and the 12 Sun’s editorial viewpoint—and Mr. Adelson was the only individual against whom the Sun 13 pleaded an alter ego theory of liability. Id.

14 The Sun similarly mischaracterizes the Court’s November 13 ruling on Request Nos. 107-15 22, 128-32, 174-88, 203-06, which simply extended the Court’s July 20 discovery limitations to 16 all requests similarly seeking communications by others beyond Mr. Adelson regarding the 17 Review-Journal’s news reporting. See Court’s Nov. 13 Order, ECF No. 222, at 16–18. In so 18 ordering, the Court rejected the Sun’s attempt to discover such communications as probative of 19 antitrust intent and anticompetitive conduct. See id. The Court likewise declined the Sun’s attempt 20 to broaden the scope of discovery as to alter ego based on a one-off-citation to Klein v. Freedom 21 Strategic Partners, LLC, 595 F. Supp. 2d 1152, 1158 (D. Nev. 2009) for the proposition that an 22 alter ego defendant can control a shell corporation indirectly. See id., at 17–18. Again, the relevant 23 issue—or the “missing link” as the Sun calls it—was not whether Mr. Adelson was involved in 24 the Review-Journal’s day-to-day business, but whether Mr. Adelson exerted any influence and 25 control over the actions of the individuals whose communications were sought. Id. The Court again 26 limited the production to documents showing an express directive by Mr. Adelson, because those 27
 28

1 were the only documents probative of the Sun’s alter ego claim—which, again, is pleaded only 2 against Mr. Adelson. Id.

3 In addition to mischaracterizing the Court’s rulings, the Sun also mischaracterizes the four 4 documents it claims constitute “shocking” new evidence that justifies reconsideration of those 5 rulings. The four documents cited by the Sun as supposedly proving that Mr. Adelson used others 6 as “tools” to carry out his wishes with respect to the Review-Journal do nothing of the sort.

7 The first document, Mr. Adelson’s employment agreement, reflects that Mr. Adelson
 8 serves as co-publisher of the Las Vegas Review-Journal—a formality given that the Adelson 9 family has a controlling interest in News+Media Capital Group LLC, which owns the paper. See 10 Adelson Employment Agreement, ECF No. 171–2. It spells out Mr. Adelson’s role as follows: “to 11 confer with and provide editorial advice and assistance, as appropriate, to the President and 12 Publisher and other editorial employees and contributors to the Las Vegas Review-Journal (the 13 ‘Newspaper’) concerning the direction of the Newspaper, topics for day-to-day or investigative or 14 other coverage by the Newspaper and, from time to time, published or unpublished information 15 obtained or prepared in gathering, receiving or processing information for communication by the 16 Newspaper to the public, including the sources for and reliability of the information.” Id.

17 The Sun’s motion draws no connection between Mr. Adelson’s employment agreement 18 and the discovery rulings it asks the Court to revisit. All the Sun says is that Mr. Adelson’s co-19 publisher title was “the missing link between Mr. Adelson and the day-to-day newspaper 20 operations.” Sun’s Mtn. to Reconsider, ECF No. 242. at 6–7. But again, the Court’s prior discovery 21 orders accepted the Sun’s premise that Mr. Adelson might be involved in newspaper operations, 22 which is why the Court ordered Defendants to produce communications showing express 23 directives from Mr. Adelson. Mr. Adelson’s employment agreement notably does not say that Mr.
 24 Adelson controls all aspects of the paper and uses others as tools to carry out his wishes. It simply 25 provides that Mr. Adelson had the authority to weigh in on the Review-Journal’s editorial 26 direction. The only other connection the Sun tries to make is that the employment agreement

27
 28

1 purportedly shows that Mr. Adelson “obviously placed Mr. O’Connor . . . in the role as President.”
 2 Id. at 9. The Sun’s speculation in this regard has no connection to the Court’s discovery rulings.

3 The other three documents the Sun points to are 2015 emails to Patrick Dumont from 4 Russell Pergament or Michael Schroeder—each of which the Sun contends shows that Mr.
 5 Dumont functions as a go-between for Mr. Adelson and others. Id. at 8–9. Again, the Sun is 6 mischaracterizing these documents.

7 The first email, a January 11, 2015 email from Mr. Pergament to Mr. Dumont, recaps [REDACTED]
 8 [REDACTED]
 9 [REDACTED]. Id. at 33–36 (Ex. 3). The language
 10 on which the Sun seizes is [REDACTED]
 11 [REDACTED]
 12 [REDACTED]
 13 [REDACTED] Id. Nothing Mr. Pergament writes shows Mr. Adelson directing Mr. Dumont to 14 do any particular act. Nothing indicates that he is supplying the information to Mr. Dumont to pass 15 along to Mr. Adelson. Mr. Adelson is not a recipient of the email and is not mentioned in it.
 16 Nothing about the email at all supports the Sun’s claim that Mr. Dumont was merely a “tool” for 17 Mr. Adelson to communicate his views about the newspaper (which News+Media did not even 18 own at the time this email was sent). And this email exchange occurred nearly one year before the 19 Adelson family acquired a controlling interest in the Review-Journal, which means it has nothing 20 to do with how Mr. Adelson interacts with the Review-Journal.

21 The second email, an October 30, 2015 email from Mr. Pergament to Mr. Dumont, provides 22 [REDACTED]. Id. at 37–39 (Ex. 4). The portion the Sun emphasizes is
 24 [REDACTED]

25 [REDACTED] Id. Notably, Mr. Pergament does not ask Mr. Dumont to report his thoughts to Mr. Adelson, 26 or to report Mr. Adelson’s thoughts back. In fact, Mr. Pergament states that [REDACTED]

27 [REDACTED] Id. Thus, this document does 28

1 not, as the Sun wrongly contends, show that Mr. Dumont was a go-between Mr. Adelson and 2 others or that Mr. Adelson directs Mr. Dumont's conduct. To the contrary, it shows that Mr.
 3 Dumont was not a go-between— [REDACTED]
 4 [REDACTED].⁵

5 The third email, an October 23, 2015 email from Mr. Schroeder to Mr. Dumont, concerns
 6 [REDACTED]. Id. at 40–41 (Ex. 5). The passage the Sun highlights is [REDACTED]
 7 [REDACTED]
 8 [REDACTED]. Id. From that statement, the Sun makes the 9 illogical leap that, therefore, Mr. Dumont is serving as a surreptitious go-between Mr. Adelson 10 and Mr. Schroeder. But that is rank speculation unsupported by anything in the email.

11 In sum, the Sun's argument that these four documents justify reconsideration and a reversal 12 of the Court's prior rulings only works if one mischaracterizes the documents and the prior rulings.

13 C. Defendants Did Not Withhold Any Documents.

14 Finally, the Sun's argument that reconsideration is warranted because Defendants 15 supposedly withheld, hid, and calculatedly delayed production of the four documents is just as 16 baseless as its other arguments.

17 The Sun contends that Defendants should have produced Mr. Adelson's employment 18 agreement months before they did, and asserts that the production was timed to deprive the Court 19 of information crucial to its discovery rulings. But the agreement was plainly not responsive to the 20 document requests the Sun lists in its motion. By way of example, Request No. 43 asks for “all 21 documents and communications in Your possession that concern or relate to the concealment of 22 the ownership of the Review-Journal.” Id. at 11. Mr. Adelson's 2016 co-publisher employment

23 ⁵ Another portion of the email reports on [REDACTED], on 24 which Mr. Pergament notes they [REDACTED] Sun's Mtn. to Reconsider, ECF No. 242, at 37–39 (Ex.
 25 4). This note, to which the Sun does not allude in its motion, likewise does not affect the Court's 26 prior discovery rulings. Put simply, the passage does not evince Mr. Adelson directing Mr.
 27 Dumont's conduct. At most, it indicates that [REDACTED] 28 [REDACTED], which is of no consequence to the issue here. Again, this email predates the purchase and has nothing to do with Mr. Adelson's interactions with the newspaper.

1 agreement does not come within that request (and post-dates the Adelson family's public 2 announcement of their acquisition of the Review-Journal newspaper). The agreement does not 3 come close to falling within any of the other requests cited by the Sun either.⁶ Moreover, as 4 explained above, Mr. Adelson's employment agreement was irrelevant to the issues presented by 5 the Sun's motions to compel. The Court's reasoning correctly hinged on whether Mr. Adelson (the 6 only alter ego defendant in this case) controlled editorial decision-making, and the discovery the 7 Court granted allowed the Sun to explore that issue. Mr. Adelson's employment agreement would 8 not have provided a basis for the Court to rule differently. Finally, even if the agreement had been 9 responsive to any requests, Defendants produced the agreement on the Court-set deadline for 10 producing certain documents regarding Mr. Adelson that were responsive to the second set: 11 October 14. See Court's Oct. 9 Order, ECF No. 168, at 68–70.

12 With respect to the three emails, the Sun likewise provides no evidence to support its 13 accusation that Defendants deliberately withheld the emails until October 20 so as to mislead the 14 Court as it was considering the Sun's motions to compel. To begin, the Court's July 20 ruling—15 the one the Sun claims requires correcting—was issued well in advance of any deadline to produce 16 responsive documents in this case, so it necessarily would have been decided without these or any 17 other documents. Next, as explained above, the emails do not support the Sun's arguments and 18 therefore would have done nothing to change the Court's rulings. Moreover, Defendants have 19 worked diligently and in good-faith to search for and produce documents to the Sun's over 300 20 requests on very short timelines, and these emails were produced in due course in accordance with 21 that process. In any event, if these emails were nearly as important as the Sun claims, then the Sun

22 ⁶ Request No. 309 asks for “all records that describe the nature of Sheldon Adelson’s ownership 23 interest in the Las Vegas Review-Journal, Inc.” Request No. 334 calls for “Documents, including 24 Communications, that concern or relate to any guidelines, directives, policies, or Practice, whether 25 formal or informal, that concern or relate to the editorial coverage of the Review-Journal’s 26 ownership.” Request No. 335 asks for “Documents, including Communications, that concern or 27 relate to any guidelines, directives, policies, or Practice, whether formal or informal, that concern or 28 relate to the editorial coverage of Sheldon Adelson, the Adelson Family, or any business owned by the Adelson family.” Request No. 342 calls for “an employee census (i.e., roster of employees) of the Review-Journal including employee’s title, employee’s department, employee’s rate of pay, and indication of employee’s full-time or part-time status, for each year from January 1, 2015, through present.” Sun’s Mtn. to Reconsider, ECF No. 242, at 11.

1 would have filed this motion in October instead of waiting over a month. After all, the ruling the 2 Sun wants reconsidered (with respect to Requests 47 and 48) was issued on July 20. Accordingly, 3 the Sun failed to establish a basis for the Court to reconsider its prior discovery orders under Rule 4 60(b).

5 III. The Court Should Reject the Sun's Request for Sanctions.

6 The Sun's request for monetary sanctions in the form of attorneys' fees and costs is 7 completely unwarranted because, as explained above, Defendants did not do anything wrong.

8 The case on which the Sun relies in support of its sanctions request involves a wholly 9 different, non-analogous set of facts and is therefore inapplicable. See USACM Liquidating Trust
 10 v. Monaco, 2010 WL 11579643 at *6-7 (D. Nev. Jan. 27, 2010). The USACM Court imposed 11 monetary sanctions in the form of fees and costs the plaintiff incurred in attempting to obtain 12 certain documents after finding as fact that the defendant, for over a year, withheld the specifically-13 requested documents and expressly misrepresented to the plaintiffs and the court—including in a 14 written brief opposing a motion to compel—that he did not have possession, custody, or control 15 of the documents. Id. at *5–7. The defendants' lies and concealment led the plaintiffs on a 16 deposition goose chase after the supposed custodians of the requested documents, each of whom 17 denied having the documents. Id. at *5–6. The defendant finally let up at his deposition, where he 18 admitted, under oath, that he had possession, custody, and control of the documents all along and 19 had lied to the plaintiffs and the court when saying otherwise. Id. at *6. On these facts, the Court 20 deemed it proper to impose sanctions under Rule 37(c)(1), concluding that “the Monacos willfully, 21 and in bad faith, withheld relevant documents from the Trust in violation of Rules 26(a) and (e),” 22 which govern the duties to make mandatory disclosures and to supplement discovery responses, 23 respectively. Id.

24 Nothing even remotely resembling the USACM situation occurred here. As discussed 25 above, Defendants have not made the misrepresentations the Sun accuses—let alone 26 misrepresentations about their possession, control, or custody of specific documents like the

27

28

1 misrepresentations at issue in USACM. Likewise, there is no evidence that Defendants delayed the 2 production of any documents or misled the Sun or the Court in any way.

3 The Sun’s other authority in support of its request for sanctions is likewise inapplicable.
 4 For starters, the Sun cites Rule 37(a)(5)(A) as authorizing sanctions in the form of attorneys’ fees, 5 subject to certain exceptions. However, that provision does not concern sanctions at all. Rather, it 6 authorizes the Court to award attorney’s fees to a party that successfully moves to compel. But the 7 Sun is not requesting attorney’s fees in connection with a motion to compel.⁷

8 Next, the Sun cites a Ninth Circuit case, Yeti by Molly Ltd. v. Deckers Outdoor Co., 259
 9 F.3d 1101, 1107 (9th Cir. 2001), for the proposition that the party opposing sanctions must show 10 their conduct was substantially justified or harmless. However, Yeti says as much in connection 11 with a request for sanctions under Rule 37(c)(1), which governs a failure to disclose the 12 information mandated by Rule 26(a) or (e). See id. at 1107. Yet nowhere does the Sun assert that 13 Defendants’ conduct ran afoul of its mandatory disclosure obligations under Rule 26(a) or (e).

14 Last, the Sun analyzes the propriety of sanctions here under the Ninth Circuit’s five-factor 15 test for deciding whether to impose terminating sanctions. Sun’s Mtn. to Reconsider, ECF No.
 16 242, at 15 (citing Wendt v. Host Int’l, Inc., 125 F.3d 806, 814 (9th Cir. 1997)). But the Sun is not 17 asking for such sanctions here. In any event, even if this were the correct standard, which it is not, 18 the factors militate in favor of not imposing sanctions at all. First, Defendants’ actions in 19 connection with the four documents do not contravene “the public’s interest in expeditious 20 resolution of litigation.” Wendt, 125 F.3d at 814. The Sun received these documents well within 21 the discovery period, and the case remains on the trial and discovery schedule initially set by the 22 Court. And, contrary to the Sun’s contention, none of the four documents requires that the Court 23 revisit its prior discovery orders. Second, the four documents do not affect “the Court’s need to 24 manage its dockets.” Id. Third, there is no cognizable “risk of prejudice” to the Sun from 25 Defendants’ proper conduct. Id.; see also Wanderer v. Johnston, 910 F.2d 652, 656 (9th Cir. 1990)

26 ⁷ Moreover, even with respect to the Sun’s prior motions to compel, the Court did not outright 27 grant relief but instead agreed in part with the Sun and agreeing in part with Defendants. That 28 outcome renders Rule 37(a)(5)(A) inapplicable. Instead, Rule 37(a)(5)(C), which applies to motions that are granted in part and denied in part, would govern.

1 (explaining that the “risk of prejudice” inquiry focuses on whether the party’s conduct “threaten[s]
2 to interfere with the rightful decision of the case” and noting that “[d]elay alone, without a focus 3 on its effects, will not justify dismissal or default”). Fourth, the four documents do not, as the Sun 4 speculates, indicate the existence of other responsive documents, such that there is a risk that case
5 will not be resolved “on [its] merits.” Wendt, 125 F.3d at 814. Defendants have already represented 6 to the Sun and this Court that they have searched for and produced Mr. Adelson’s responsive 7 documents. See Defs’ Opp. to Mtn. to Compel (ESI and ACP Information), ECF No. 143, at 2, 9.
8 Fifth, when a party is seeking monetary sanctions, the appropriate, “less drastic sanction” is no 9 sanction at all. Wendt, 125 F.3d at 814.

10 In short, the Sun has cited no law justifying sanctions on the facts present here.

11 IV. Conclusion.

12 For the above reasons, the Court should deny the Sun’s request that this Court reconsider 13 its July 20 and November 13 discovery rulings, as well as its request for sanctions.
